1: FORGETTING TO COLLECT EVIDENCE

After a bike accident, chances are you are very injured. It can be easy to leave the scene and forget to get evidence. You can do three things to collect evidence:

- 1. Take pictures
- 2. Get phone numbers from witnesses
- 3. Keep your bike

2: TALKING TO THE INSURANCE COMPANY

A man with a beard and a white t-shirt is sitting on a couch, talking on a black smartphone. He is smiling and looking down. A red pillow is visible behind him. The background is a light-colored wall with a window covered by sheer curtains.

Do not talk to the insurance company. They are not paid to help you get the money you deserve—they are paid to save their company money. Let your lawyer talk to them for you.

You shouldn't try to do this alone. Our lawyer has handle cases like these before. We know how to get you the money you deserve. Don't miss out on the result you deserve because you didn't call a lawyer.
